marrying her without the formality of becoming separated from either by divorce or death, a twenty-thre -- ven :- old wirl, who says that she is married only to Harry Ellecott, although she is claimed as the wife of James Sullivan and James E. Fox, jr., told a scrange tale of a life crowded with unusual matrimonial experiences when seen today at the Morrisania Jail, where she is awaiting hearing to-morrow.

"Seven years ago, when I was an innocent girl of sixteen," she said, "my heart was won by a lad named Jimmie Sullivan, who gave me a 10-cent ring, which I then believed to be a fine gold wedding-ring. He took me home to his mother, and we told the story that we had been married by Father Flotz. I worked in a candy factory and supported Jimmie, whom I loved dearly until he beat me after accusing me of going with two other boys. I kept on working for him until two months before my child was born. Jimmie's mother tool the child and then they threw me ou of the house. I lived in a furnished room, where Jimmie continued to come and see me. He beat me one night after a dance and I quit him.

Married to Ellecott.

"I went to work at a comb factory at No. 159 East One Hundred and Twentyeighth street, and Harry Ellecott worked at the same bench. He wanted me to marry him. He knew all about Sullivan, for the two quarrelled over me. Ellecott persuaded me to marry him and we were wedded by the Rev. John O'Brien at Holy Rosary Church. I loved him and stuck to him like glue He inherited $1,400 and we both quit work and spent it. When it was gone : had to support him, and he made me sit in a window to do sewing where he could watch me while loading in a pool-

I loved these men truly and stuck to them until they beat me."

On Friday James E. Fox called upor Ellecott. He told him that his son had just married a woman, and he, the elder Fox, had learned that she was Ellecott's wife. The result was that Ellecott fell upon the dovecote young Fox had provided with a policeman and a warrant on Saturday night. In court the young woman was held in $1,000 bail.

To-morrow, it is said, three marriage sertificares will be produced in court. Sullivan, the first husband of the woman, to-day denied that he was married to her. When he did so his mother, who stood by, said: "He's protecting her. If he goes into court and swears to that I will have him arrested for perjury. I have seen the certificate, and so have others.
